Preserving our community's heritage — one story at a time

Significance Card Activity

1. Before the activity create brief information cards about either people or events that the students have studied. Include a picture with correct citation and a brief synopsis of the person's contributions or the ramifications of an event.
2. Divide the students into groups.
3. Study the Significance Task cards
4. As a group discuss the information on the cards. Then together decide which person or event is the most historically significant and why.
5. Rank the events (people) from most to least significant or choose the most historically significant person or event.
6. Share and justify your ranking either orally or on chart paper.

This is a review activity that can also be used to assess the student learning at the end of a unit of study. In higher grades it could also be a written examination question.
